

Terms of Use for E-Resources

Terms of Use and Copyright Regulations

The use of licensed electronic resources, such as journals, databases and e-books, is subject to special terms and conditions. When you use these resources, please take note of the publishers' copyright regulations and terms of use, which can usually be found online on the publisher's server. By accessing these resources, you agree to the publisher's terms of use.

In general, the following applies for all resources:

- Only members of institutions that pay for access may access the full texts.
- The full texts may only be printed or saved for personal use or for teaching and research purposes.
- Systematically downloading articles or search results, in particular with robots, is not permitted.
- Misuse can result in publishers blocking the entire campus from their servers.
- Full texts (articles, chapters, etc.) may not be given to third parties in either electronic or printed form.
- The commercial use of research results is strictly forbidden.

